What would large scale poultry production look like in southeast Kansas?

If Tyson Foods builds a processing plant in Kansas, farmers in surrounding counties will have the opportunity to engage in contract poultry production. Join the Southwind Extension District and the Allen and Neosho County Farm Bureaus to learn what this could mean for potential contract poultry growers.

Kansas State University Extension Poultry Specialist Dr. Scott Beyer will be on hand to answers your questions.

Topics may include:

- What does a typical day look like in poultry production?
- How would a contract work?
- What rules and regulations does the poultry industry
- What are the required manure management practices?
- How do I finance and construct barns?
